Art Rejections:

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Despotidis et al, U.S. pat. Appl. Pub. No. 2003/0103377.

Per claims 1-2 and 12, Despotidis discloses a method of adapting a user interface on a display of a network protocol configurator/tester having a visual network plan which is used for the configuration of the telecommunication task by a user (see page 1, par. 13 and page 5, par. 49). The method also comprises the step of allowing the user to modify the visual network plan on the display device according to hardware and/or software existed in the system (see page 3, par. 30).

Despotidis does not explicitly teach modifying the network plan in comparison to the basic network plan.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to recognize that any modification (to a plan) must be made on an existing (basic) plan. In other words, a modification to the plan is a change in comparison to the previous plan.

Per claims 3-6, 8-9 and 11, Despotidis teaches storing data files associated with each network elements in a database where the data files would be used by the network protocol configurator/tester in response to user's input (see page 5, par. 50). Despotidis does not explicitly teach some data files being text files.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to recognize that some data associated with the network element such as description of a router would have been in text because it would have enabled the user to review the element.

Per claims 7 and 10, Despotidis teaches allowing the user to modify the existing network plan on the display device, e.g., adding or deleting a node or a link (see page 3, par. 30). It would have been further obvious to one skilled in the art to recognize that some data files associated with certain network elements, e.g., link information, would have been generated or updated to reflect such changes.

Art Unit: 2154

Per claims 13-16, Despotidis also teaches using highlights or other visual indicators to indicate status of a link, e.g., selected link (see page 2, par. 26).
